Title: Nixon Presidential Returned Materials Collection: White House Special Files: Contested Materials

Creator: Presidential Materials Review Board

Extent: 55 boxes, approximately 24 linear feet

Repository: Richard Nixon Presidential Library and Museum
18001 Yorba Linda Boulevard
Yorba Linda, California 92886

Abstract: The Nixon Presidential Returned Materials Collection: White House Special Files: Contested Materials consists of documents defined by the President Materials Review Board as private/personal and private/political. These materials were returned to the estate of Richard Nixon in 1996. In July 2007, the Richard Nixon Foundation deeded these materials to the National Archives and Records Administration.

Administrative Information

Access: Open, exceptions for Personal Privacy

Publication Rights: The Richard Nixon Library and Birthplace Foundation has deeded all copyrights which it has in the materials to the United States of America and those materials are in the public domain. Copyright restrictions may exist for commercial materials included in the collection.

Administrative History

In 1972, members of the Nixon White House staff created the White House Special Files unit to physically secure perceived sensitive political and administrative materials, personal materials relating or belonging to Richard Nixon, and documents containing the President’s handwriting. These materials were removed from the White House Central Files: Subject Files, Staff Member and Office Files (SMOFs), and Alphabetical Name Files, and placed into the newly created White House Special Files collection (please see the finding aids for the White House Central Files and White House Special Files for additional information). Materials meeting the above criteria created after the September 1972 transfer were automatically placed into the White House Special Files collection. Upon the resignation of Richard Nixon in August 1974, the Special Files were placed into the custody of the National Archives and Records Services (NARS). In December, 1974, President Gerald Ford signed the Presidential Recordings and Materials Preservation Act (PRMPA), which Congress produced to govern the Nixon White House materials.

In 1987, the Nixon Presidential Materials Staff placed a notice of intention to open the first installment of the White House Special Files in the Federal Register, as mandated by 36 CFR, Part 1275, produced in 1986. The notice of intention allowed for any person with a vested interest in the documents to argue against release of any “personal and private” materials. Former President Richard Nixon contested the release of approximately 42,191 documents (these materials became known as the “contested materials”) of the White House Special Files slated for release. The negotiated agreement of 1979 between Richard Nixon and the National Archives, and 36 CFR, Part 1275, which described the procedures National Archives and Records Administration personnel would use to process the Nixon materials, defined the types of documents that were considered “returnable”, i.e. private/personal and private/political. Under 36 CFR, Part 1275, contested materials were reviewed by the Presidential Materials Review Board, which consisted of NARA and other federal personnel. A review of the contested documents commenced in May 1988, with an evaluation of each claim on a case by case basis. In July, 1996, the board decided to return to the estate of Richard Nixon approximately 20% of the contested materials which were deemed private/political or private/personal. The approximately 8,900 documents deemed personal and/or political were shipped to the privately run Richard Nixon Library and Birthplace in October, 1996. The remaining contested documents not returned to the Nixon estate (also known as the retained documents) were opened and made available for research by the National Archives and Records Administration’s Nixon Presidential Materials Staff on October 17, 1996.

The returned section of the contested documents remained with the Richard Nixon Library and Birthplace Foundation archive. In October, 2006, an agreement between the Nixon Foundation’s Executive Director and the Director Designate of the Richard Nixon Presidential Library and Museum was made regarding the processing and release of the Nixon Estate’s Returned Contested Materials. In the fall of 2006, the Nixon Presidential Materials Staff of NARA reviewed all documents within the Contested Materials for personal privacy. In July 2007, the Richard Nixon Foundation deeded these materials to the National Archives.
Scope and Content Summary

The negotiated agreement of 1979 between Richard Nixon and the National Archives, and 36 CFR, Part 1275 (produced in 1986), which described the procedures National Archives and Records Administration personnel used to process the Nixon materials, defined the types of documents that were considered “returnable” to the former President, i.e. private/personal and private/political. Under 36 CFR, Part 1275, any contested materials were reviewed by the Presidential Materials Review Board, which consisted of NARA and other federal personnel. After former President Nixon contested the release of the first section of White House Special Files, a review of the contested documents began in May, 1988, with an evaluation of each claim on a case by case basis. In July, 1996, the board elected to return to the estate of Richard Nixon approximately 20% of the contested materials which were deemed private/political or private/personal. The approximately 8,900 documents deemed political and/or personal were shipped to the privately run Richard Nixon Library and Birthplace in October, 1996.

The materials within the Contested Materials returned to the Nixon Estate fall under two distinct categories. Materials defined as private/political by the Presidential Materials Review Board include historical materials which relate to political activities of Richard Nixon and his staff but do not pertain to the carrying out of duties of the President as defined by constitutional or statutory powers. These materials include publications, strategy memorandums and correspondence regarding the 1968, 1970 and 1972 campaigns. Included under this distinction are materials relating to the involvement of White House staff members in the activities of the Republican National Committee, and the status of Richard Nixon as the head of the Republican Party.

Materials defined as private/personal by the Presidential Materials Review Board include personal information regarding President Richard Nixon, his wife, Patricia Nixon, his daughters, Tricia Nixon Cox and Julie Nixon Eisenhower, and his sons-in-law, Edward Cox and David Eisenhower. These materials include any interpersonal correspondence, memoranda regarding any member of Richard Nixon’s family, and family financial information. Any materials comprising a clear invasion of privacy of any member of the White House staff, including correspondence, private financial information, or personnel issues also fell under this distinction.

As dictated by the Presidential Recordings and Materials Preservation Act (PRMPA) and 36 CFR, Part 1275, archivists from the National Archives and Records Administration reviewed the materials from the White House Special Files and withdrew any documents considered to be personal or political. The archivists placed withdrawal sheets in the folders in which documents were removed, upon which a brief description of the document was listed and used the restriction code ‘G’ (“Withdrawn and returned private and personal matter,” as defined in PRMPA) as the reason for the removal of the documents. The Presidential Materials Review board created an additional withdrawal sheet for the re-reviewed materials stating its decision regarding each document.

In the fall of 2006, the Nixon Presidential Materials Staff of the National Archives and Records
Administration reviewed all documents within the Contested Materials for personal privacy only.
