Biographical Note

Douglas Lawrence Hallett was born in San Francisco, California on April 16, 1949. In 1971, he earned his Bachelor degree cum laude in American Studies at Yale University. While in college, he served as an editor at the Yale Daily News.

On July 29, 1970, the Wall Street Journal published his editorial “Campus Unrest: Don’t blame Mr. Nixon”, which caught the attention of the White House and was cited by President Nixon during a press conference the next day. Mr. Hallett was subsequently contacted by the White House on various occasions to provide his opinions on current issues. His opinion pieces led to a White House internship during his last year of college and another in June 1971 following his graduation from Yale. Mr. Hallett was subsequently hired as a White House Staff Aide on August 23, 1971.

Mr. Hallett left the White House at the end of the summer of 1972 in order to attend Harvard School of Law. He received his Juris Doctor degree in 1975 and primarily practiced insurance law in Southern California.

Mr. Hallett’s time in the Nixon administration began following the July 29, 1970 publication of his Wall Street Journal article “Campus Unrest: Don’t blame Mr. Nixon.” The White House took note of the article and President Nixon cited it during a press conference the next day. Mr. Hallett was subsequently contacted by White House Staff Assistant Jonathan Rose on various occasions to provide his opinion on current issues. Requests from administration staff, including Special Counsel Charles W. Colson, White House Chief of Staff H. R. “Bob” Haldeman, and Special Counsel Richard A. Moore, were channeled through Rose, a Yale alum who had previously been an editor at the university’s newspaper.

It was during this period that Bob Haldeman offered Mr. Hallett an opportunity to spend his spring break working on the staff of White House speechwriter Raymond K. Price, Jr. Hallett then received an offer from Charles Colson to work on his staff as a White House summer intern. The internship began on June 1, 1971 after Hallett graduated cum laude from Yale. Mr. Hallett became a permanent Staff Aide to Mr. Colson on August 23, 1971.

Mr. Hallett’s work during his time with Mr. Colson consisted primarily of drafting speeches and articles on a wide array of domestic and foreign policy issues. He also drafted materials for Vice President Spiro Agnew, Congress, the Cabinet, and other members of the administration such as Herb Klein, the White House Director of Communications. At times, the work involved “crisis management,” which entailed drafting fact sheets, articles, and speeches on topical issues of the day for administration spokesmen. Topics ranged from the publication of the Pentagon Papers to the Vietnam War. Hallett was allowed to express his thoughts on a given topic but did not contribute to the creation of administration policies.

In 1971, the Special Counsel’s office was tasked with generating materials in preparation for President Nixon’s reelection campaign on the following interest groups: Aging, Youth, Spanish Speaking, Jewish, Labor, Ethnic, and Veterans. During the first several months of his time on Colson’s staff, Hallett developed Spanish Speaking, Ethnic, and Labor reports.

In response to requests from Colson, Haldeman, and other White House staff members, Mr. Hallett continued to furnish his opinions on a wide array of topics as he had done prior to joining the administration. Hallett’s candid “idea memos” often served to voice the position of Devil’s Advocate as he endeavored to provide insight into the mindset of the “Ivy League Liberal Elitist” class.

Mr. Hallett left the White House late summer 1972 in order to attend Harvard School of Law. Most of his speech files were transferred to speechwriter Steve Karalekas. The majority of “idea memos” were sent to Colson and Haldeman. After leaving the Nixon White House, Hallett continued to correspond with Charles Colson, including letters sent during and after Colson’s time in federal prison for obstruction of justice. That correspondence is represented in this collection as are drafts of articles and editorials about the administration and Mr. Hallett’s time in the White House.

The Douglas Hallett collection is arranged in five series: correspondence and memorandums, drafts of articles and a book manuscript, subject files, Rolodex contact cards, and printed matter.

The correspondence and memorandums series is dominated by correspondence to and from Charles W. Colson, beginning during Mr. Hallett’s internships at the White House and extending beyond the end of the Nixon presidency. The correspondence includes letters written by Mr. Colson during his time in federal prison.

The drafts series contains multiple drafts of a manuscript on the subject of the Nixon administration as well as drafts of Mr. Hallett’s New York Times article “A low-level memoir of the Nixon White House.”

The subject files series is arranged alphabetically by subject. These folders include materials pertaining to the interest group reports created for the 1972 presidential reelection campaign. In addition, there is a White House telephone directory.

The Rolodex contact cards are arranged in alphabetical order.

Printed matter consists almost entirely of magazines and newspapers containing articles about various aspects of the Nixon presidency. Also included in the series is a 1973 Inaugural invitation with related materials and photographs of Mr. Hallett at the White House. The original photographs have been transferred to the audiovisual holdings of the Richard Nixon Presidential Library and Museum. Reference photocopies are available in the open folder.

Also included in the Hallett donated materials were 255 books that have been transferred to the Nixon Library’s book collection.
