OF COUNSEL
MURRAY M. CHOTINER

Monday, June 4

Dear Helen,

Mr. Chotiner is in California, so I've finally found a moment to drop you a line.

You have no idea how delighted I was you "dropped in"! It's really a pity we don't see more of each other, as I so thoroughly enjoy your good company.

I hope Jane had a good time; I thought she did. (I still laugh every time I remember her I'm-going-to-be-sick remark when Finnegan wiped his mouth on her skirt. ---She should be around when he comes in from the rain and is sopping wet and THEN dries off on your skirt!)

I'm typing atrociously this morning as I'm really not "with" it. Last night was my bridge night and we had a rip-roaring good time, and I consumed much-too-much wine. As a result I wish I were back in bed at the moment.

I wrote Dad and Meg about your walking into the wrong house before finally finding mine, and of course, they laughed their heads off. I got a letter from him Saturday saying he'd told Jane (??) ---Bob's daughter---about it in a letter. Evidently she corresponds with him, which I think is great. (I can't even remember my own name this morning, let alone someone else's...)

After weeks and weeks of rain (it seemed) we finally have hit a hot, dry spell - and have had the air conditioner on steadily. I must say it's a joy to walk into a cool house, which is most unexpected---as I've been so accustomed to it being warm.

I also took the bull by the horns and have contracted for new steps in the back. So the next time you come there will be iron stairs, a la fire escape type. Would you believe, I had four estimates done---one for wooden stairs using pine, another with fir, and another wit' redwood -- and all three : oden steps cost more than the iron?!: (The redwood was $350 more than the iron!)

Hopefully, they'll have the job completed by the middle of next week.

I also bought a membership in the community swim club, which I think is a move in the right direction. Both Matt and Nick are old enough to ride their bikes there, and it will give them something to do during the summer. They are reaching the age now where they get very bored with nothing specific to do -- and I frankly think the television is the worst possible thing for them to be watching all day long. Soo--they're tickled pink and have been swimming every possible moment since the pool opened.

Bennett isn't that keen on swimming, but yesterday while we were there he ran into three girls he knew, so that did help! (I have a sneaking suspicion he'll be wanting to swim more often now.)

We put the top down on the car Saturday and went on a picnic. It was the first of the year and kinda' fun---although I'm getting lazier in my old age and find I don't do as much climbing and running around as I used to. The kids have a ball chasing through the woods and climbing all over the place.

We picnicked at a spot that has a parking area, tables scattered through the woods, etc. and were astounded to see a Bentley parked in the lot. (They look almost exactly like a Rolls Royce.) As you know, Bennett is the car buff in the family--so inspected the car from all angles. But what really tickled us was that we spotted the people who owned the car instantly -- even though they were sitting at a table 'way back in the woods. Can you imagine going on a picnic dressed in a business suit, complete with white shirt and TIE?? And the woman was very elegantly "coifed", was in a pale turquoise pant-suit which screamed dollars, but it was Bennett who spotted the fitted picnic basket, which comes as standard equipment with the car! (Isn't it nice to know even the monied go picnicking?)

I do have work to do, so guess I should get on with it. Tell Jane I sent a warm hello, and anytime you can bring her back, please do.

I sure thought of you during the '500. Gosh, what a terrible time. (We were getting the rain here too, then.) Mr. Chotiner was invited but turned it down (can you imagine???) -- 'said he and his wife went once a few years back with this particular host -- and he drove them crazy explaining everything to them every moment. He said, "The next time we go, we're going alone!"

Well, dear, write when the spirit moves you-- and come back again soon.

*Maybe we can impress your postman
with the envelope!*

Much love, Barbara
