Mr. Ehrlichman:

Wicker is worth reading. The result of rather an alcoholic lunch, (with more of me in it than I would like) but showing the first signs that he can grasp the notion that we are doing something new, not something old. Hence the Eisenhower contrast.

Enclosure: The New Republic, January 24, 1970