Robert Meyers, a tax attorney in Los Angeles, has been suggested to me as an ideal selection for director of the Internal Revenue Service.

I have not seen Bob in many years, but I think Finch undoubtedly knows him from recent contact.

As I recall, he presents an excellent image and would be a logical selection.

MEMORANDUM

Go back through the last twenty years and pick up all the unfair attacks that have been made on RN, inadvertently and otherwise. This should be a rich harvest, if only someone will get at it. Particularly, it is essential that this be done with regard to Humphrey's statements in the last campaign. The mythology is already setting in to the effect that Humphrey was nicey-nice and that if any attacks were made, RN was responsible. Again, this is a reflection on our own ineptitude in failing to get a good counterattack developed and sold. A good article even showed book could be made on "RN, the most maligned political figure of this century".

Mr. Adams inquired about the property which is in storage and its disposition, and I advised him that since he could distribute it in kind, the three sons could take as tenants in common with a 1/3 interest each, and he should not hold up distribution for that reason. I trust that was in order.

FOR THE PRESIDENT

RE: SALE OF YOUR APARTMENT

Dick Ritzel reports that his office is being besieged with potential purchasers.

He will follow up on the Mary Rockefeller and Bluhdorn leads which Mrs. Nixon gave me, but it is his strong recommendation that the trustee-bank be permitted to accept sealed bids at a date and time certain. The trustee and Ritzel (in consultation with you) will then select the best bidder who may not necessarily be the highest bidder.

In view of the heavy interest in the apartment, Ritzel does not feel that it is possible to merely set a price and select a buyer. At any price other than a totally ridiculous price there will be six or seven buyers and he will be forced to an embarrassing personal selection.

Therefore, sealed bids (where no one knows who submitted what price) is perhaps the best way to do it.

Do you approve of the idea of the trustee taking sealed bids?

Dear Mr. van de Velde:

It is good that Paul H. O'Neill has been nominated for a Rockefeller Public Service Award in the field of Administration.

I have followed and to some extent participated in Paul's career, first at the Bureau of the Budget and then at the Office of Management and Budget, over the last four years.

I first encountered him on a cold Sunday when we were all bare at the office in our shirtsleeves and Sunday work clothes trying to solve an imminent problem. Paul was then a Deputy Assistant Director of the Bureau of the Budget and he immediately impressed me with his lucidity and grasp of the facts. Since then, as you know, he has steadily risen both in the scope of his responsibility and in the esteem of his colleagues.

I know of no one (this may seem like an extreme statement, but I mean it sincerely because it is true) in the Nixon Administration who has made a greater contribution to the achievement of the President's goals for the improvement of the administration of the government than Paul. His professional competence and leadership have contributed much but his personal example has contributed even more.
He is professional, he is competent and he is congenial and therefore he is effective.

I hope he receives an award because I am sure he deserves it.

INTRODUCTION

Source of Names

The candidates for the various appointive positions in the Federal Government listed in this book come from many sources. Some are individuals who responded to President-Elect Nixon's call for talented new personnel to join in his Administration. Others are the result of specific requests for suggestions made to Republican Members of Congress, Governors and Party officials. Many suggestions arise from staff requests to private organizations such as universities, the National Industrial Conference Board, the National Association of Manufacturers, the American Enterprise Institute and the U.S. Chamber of Commerce. Certain of the listed candidates were proposed by the chairmen of the Task Forces, or by groups of experts brought together for the sole purpose of recommending candidates in their field of expertise. These sources not only recommended new candidates, but also indicated those incumbents who, in their opinion, should be retained.

PositionsCovered

The New York Committee, which compiled this book, generally considered candidates for the posts of Assistant Secretary or equivalent and above. Candidates who seemed suited for appointment to positions below the level of Assistant Secretary were sent to the Washington Committee for processing. These will be presented separately to the Secretaries-Designate.

Exceptions to the minimum limitation of Assistant Secretary or equivalent generally fall into the job classifications which were among those discussed at the Cabinet briefing in Washington. These are positions relating to Public Affairs, Congressional Liaison, Finance, and Personnel, which jobs are in some instances handled by an Assistant to the Secretary or similar classifications.

Candidates for positions listed below have been discussed with the following:

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Public Affairs</th>
<th>Herb Klein</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Congressional Liaison</td>
<td>Bryce Harlow</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Counsel</td>
<td>John Mitchell</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Personnel</td>
<td>Harry Flemming</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>
Also included in this book are a few candidates for Assistant to the Secretary who appear sufficiently outstanding to warrant early consideration by the Secretaries-Designate.

Reviewing Process

The names included in this book have been generally reviewed by members of the staff for professional competence, political conviction and past service, if any. Among the reviewing committee were representatives of the research team, the campaign management, and political advisors. In those instances where information on a candidate is incomplete but strong reasons for consideration exist, the candidate is included even though much additional research needs to be done. As an example, there are candidates suggested by the American Enterprise Institute on which the only information is a Who's Who biography and an AEI print-out. Because AEI has screened these names for technical, academic and professional competence, and for political suitability, they have been included even if no member of the reviewing committee had an independent judgment.

Some positions in this book have a large number of candidates, and others have few or none. While a candidate is often listed for more than one job, even where that does not occur it is generally expected that unsuccessful candidates will be considered for the next lower position when his higher suggestion is filled.

Additional Names

New candidates are being proposed each day. Often these are better than earlier proposals by virtue of the longer time given to consideration. As these names come in, they will be reviewed by the Committee, and those worth consideration will be forwarded to the Secretaries-Designate. In this way, each Secretary Designate can keep his book current with the master book kept in Room 1435 of the Pierre Hotel.

The reviewing committee will be happy to review suggestions from the Secretaries-Designate for positions in their respective Departments, if that is thought to be helpful.
In choosing his Cabinet, the President-Elect set a very high standard of excellence, giving long and careful consideration to each choice. Mr. Nixon has expressed the desire that the same care and deliberation be exercised with regard to Sub-Cabinet positions. Many candidates will be suggested in the next several weeks that are not now included in this book. Where a very highly qualified candidate is not at hand, it would seem wiser to delay a choice rather than compromise with quality.
