MEMORANDUM

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

February 9, 1970

TO: Harry Dent

FROM: Tom Lias Tom

Our copies of this invitation apparently crossed in the mail. I have arranged to have the costs picked up for Bill Gifford. I think he is well equipped to observe this group because of his past experience on the Hill. If Bud Krogh wants to go that would be fine too, but he probably isn't as familiar with the players as Gifford.

As far as the group itself goes, it is obvious where they are on the political spectrum.

Mr. Egil Krogh
Deputy Asst. to the President for Domestic Affairs
Executive Office Bldg.
Washington, D.C.

Dear Mr. Krogh:

We would like to invite you to join us and approximately 220 other young people from all over the nation to a conference entitled:

"Needed: A Republicanism for the 1980's"
(A Call for Modern Republican Leadership)

The meeting will be held on March 13-15 at Airlie House, a nationally known conference retreat about one hour from Washington, D.C.

As one of a small number of young, emerging, political, business, civic, educational and media leaders, you will hold a high position in the Republican Party or in a key independent political movement during the next three decades. As a future leader, you can see the necessity for the Republican Party to strengthen itself in order to meet the overwhelming problems of America in the coming decades.

This conference is a small, but essential, first step for making these changes in the Republican Party. This gathering will give you a chance to meet and exchange ideas with young men and women from all over the country, all levels of government, and many professions within the political system. You will be able to talk with representatives from all philosophies within the Republican Party and establish contact with leaders of major independent groups.

The conference discussions will be based on the general theme "Needed: A Republicanism for the 1980's." The sessions will help form in all participants a shared understanding of the basic social forces at work today, their likely consequences, and their implications for Republicanism in the future. It is hoped that participants will pool their resources and come up with ideas and alternative programs which they as future leaders can implement. You will leave with some evidence too of the diverse viewpoints and range of legitimate interests to which any national party must accommodate itself. In short, the purpose of the discussions will be to take a constructive look at the future, not an adulatory or carping appraisal of the recent past and the present.

We are in the process of preparing a program which will be unique. There will be no long-winded speeches, no dull research papers. The agenda will be built around a number of discussion leaders who will be selected not only for their expertise, but also for their ability to stimulate discussion and present new perspectives. Everyone will be urged to participate freely and openly. You will be receiving more detailed information on the program itself soon.

The cost of the conference is $52, which covers room, board, transportation from Washington, D.C. and conference activities at Airlie House over the weekend of March 13-15. If we are successful in fundraising efforts, this cost may be reduced substantially, but plan on paying this amount.

Because space is limited at Airlie House to about 220 participants and because we anticipate considerable interest, participants will be selected on a first come, first serve basis. We urge you to return the enclosed reservation form as soon as possible to insure lodging. All reservations must be received by February 20. More detailed logistical information will be sent to all participants at the end of February.

We hope you will be able to attend. We think it will be a challenging and rewarding weekend.

Sincerely,

THE SPONSORING COMMITTEE
